Teaching Young Writers in K-3 Grades

June 28-29, 2016

Sheraton Salt Lake City Hotel, 150 West 500 South, Salt Lake City, UT

This Year's Symposium Features:

June 28, 2016

Dr. Nell Duke

*Write Here Write Now:
High-Quality Writing Instruction K to 3*

High-quality writing instruction is important from the earliest days of schooling. In this presentation, Dr. Duke will share markers of quality in primary-grade writing instruction, with concrete examples from a range of classrooms. She will share an approach you can use to plan writing projects that not only includes research-supported practices, but is also highly engaging for young children.

Nell K. Duke, Ed.D., is a professor in literacy, language, and culture and the combined program in education and psychology at the University of Michigan as well as a member of the International Literacy Association Literacy Research Panel. Dr. Duke received her Bachelor's degree from Swarthmore College and her Masters and Doctoral degrees from Harvard University. Her work focuses on early literacy development, particularly among children living in poverty. Her specific areas of expertise include development of informational reading and writing in young children, comprehension development and instruction in early schooling, and issues of equity in literacy education. She has recently served, or is currently serving, as Co-Principal Investigator of projects funded by the Institute of Education Sciences, the National Science Foundation, the Spencer Foundation, and the George Lucas Educational Foundation.

In 2014, Dr. Duke was awarded the P. David Pearson Scholarly Influence Award from the Literacy Research Association. She has also received the American Educational Research Association Early Career Award, the Literacy Research Association Early Career Achievement Award, the International Reading Association Dina Feitelson Research Award, the National Council of Teachers of English Promising Researcher Award, and the International Reading Association Outstanding Dissertation Award.

Dr. Duke is author and co-author of numerous journal articles and book chapters. Her most recent book is Inside Information: Developing Powerful Readers and Writers of Informational Text through Project-based Instruction.

She has taught preservice, inservice and doctoral courses in literacy education, speaks and consults widely on literacy education, and is an active member of several literacy-related organizations. She has served as author or consultant on a several educational programs, including Connect4Learning.

Dr. Cynthia Puranik

What Teachers Need to Know About Supporting Early Writing

Writing is a challenging activity for most school-age children as noted from children's performance on national assessments. In this presentation, Dr. Puranik will provide an overview of the importance of transcription skills in the development of writing and then focus on how teachers can support writing for young, beginning writers.

Cynthia Puranik, CCC-SLP/Ph. D. is an associate professor of Communication Sciences and Disorders in the College of Education and Human Development at Georgia State University. In addition, she is an affiliate faculty of the Research on the Challenges of Acquiring Language and Literacy initiative at GSU. Dr. Puranik completed her undergraduate studies at the University of Bombay, India, and her graduate studies at the University of Florida, Gainesville. She completed a two-year postdoctoral fellowship at the Florida Center for Reading Research, Florida State University after which she spent seven years at the University of Pittsburgh. Cynthia is a certified speech-language pathologist with several years of experience working in various clinical settings.

Dr. Puranik is recipient of the 2016 Presidential Early Career Awards, the highest honor bestowed by the United States Government to recognize the pursuit of innovative research and commitment to community service as demonstrated through scientific leadership, public education, or community outreach. Dr. Puranik will accept her award at a Washington, DC ceremony this spring.

Dr. Puranik's research focuses on understanding early writing development- including assessment and instruction of early writing skills. She has simultaneously explored both basic theoretical and highly applied research pathways to address questions pertaining to children's emergent and early conventional writing. Her recent projects have involved developing and testing the effectiveness of an early writing intervention. Her research has been supported by the Institute of Education Sciences, and the U.S. Department of Education. Her articles have appeared in journals such as the Early Childhood Research Quarterly, Journal of Experimental Child Psychology, Journal of Learning Disabilities, Journal of Speech, Language, and Hearing Research, and Reading & Writing.
